This "CAMPUS" suit is one of our most sought styles for Fall. The picture gives a pretty good idea of its lines, and the kind of fellows who wear 'em. It's a snappy, dashing sort of a suit, mostly in fancy worsteds, and the sort of a suit that you would have to pay $45 for, if a good custom maker turned it out for you to measure, and could equal the style and fit of this Sincerity Suit.

$15 isn't much to pay for a suit, but we can show you a lot of styles that you'll want at this low price.

The city of Ashland has turned down the proposition to erect a municipal lighting plant. The matter was submitted to a vote of the people and was lost. Strange as it may seem, municipal lighting plants have not been saving the money that was expected, as politics enter into the government of the plants, which is always a bad thing.

No losses are reported from the cranberry growers, but most of them had an abundance of water to cover the berries. The railway commission has ordered a change in the Portage branch of the Wisconsin Central. It seems that the time of the train on this branch of the road has been unsatisfactory for some time past, and an attempt was made by petition to get the company to change the time but no attention was paid to the matter, so an appeal was made to the commission for relief, and they must have found that the people were in the right.

Duties of Town Clerks.
The office of town clerk has always been an important one, one to which only the most competent man in each town, who could be induced to accept it, should be elected. And from now on, in view of enactments made by the last legislature, it will be even more important than ever before. In the future the duties of recording vital statistics, marriages, births, deaths, etc., will devolve upon these clerks. Nor is this the only new duty that has been placed upon them. It is now the duty of every town clerk to investigate, or cause to be investigated, the cause, origin and circumstances of every fire occurring in his town, when the value of the property destroyed or damaged exceeds $25, and ascertain whether such fire was the result of accident, carelessness or design. This report must be made to the fire marshal at Madison. The town clerks, if they do not receive a stated salary exceeding $50 a year, are to receive $2 for each report, and a mileage at the rate of ten cents a mile for each mile traveled in going to and from the place of the fire. The investigation of the fire must be commenced within two days after it occurs and any clerk who fails to make a report as required by law subjects himself to a fine of from $25 to $200.

Peary evidently thinks the pole will keep, as he has postponed his expedition until next summer.

The Chicago woman who lost $800 in cash and jewelry out of her stock-tug ought to buy a money belt.

The Washington dancing girl who bathed in beer was merely further demonstrating her love for hops.

The woman who died recently at the age of 107 and claimed that she owed her life to eating onions had a strong reason for her prolonged existence.

An Italian duke who has no bad habits and no debts is engaged to an American girl, but we notice that the girl's father is a multimillionaire, all the same.

Duke of the Abruzzi is talking of making a balloon trip to the pole. Walter Wellman may be able to furnish him with a diagram of the best aerial route.

We have our doubts about kissing removing freckles, says the Nashville American, since nothing that quite a sprinkling of married ladies have a complexion like a gullion.

It is officially decided that the dowager empress of China is ill, and the infinitely emperor may as well put off appointing the day when he hopes to rule where he is supposed to reign.

A fondle writer in a Washington paper says that there are some husbands who cannot be managed any better than some mules. It might be added that some mules have another attribute in common with the homely male—they are great kickers.

It may be true as the professor tells us that peanuts contain more nourishment than beef steak, but no one would claim that a neck of goosebumps can impart that healthful expression that the countenance that seems glued on to it when good digestion waits on a large, juicy breakfast.

Following the enactment of a law in Texas, requiring that sheets on hotel beds shall be at least nine feet long, comes the passage of a bill in Georgia making clean sheets compulsory in the hotels of that state. The next step will naturally be legal provision for clean tablecloths and dry napkins in all hotels and restaurants.

A New York clergyman said at Chautauque the other day that there had been altogether too much preaching about the Jobbites, the Mahadites and the other bits, and that though about the living gospel, but not enough to remember the names of all those fifty people if the preacher did not constantly jog our memories.

These are somewhat embarrassing days for modest judges. One in Omaha was actually caused to blush by a handsome and grateful woman to whom he had given the custody of her children, and who proceeded to hug and kiss him in open court, with out decency first obtained. It is noteworthy, however, that he had not previously indicated either for assault or for contempt of court.

The war on cruelty to animals has reached an acute stage at Omaha, where the Rev. John Williams has appealed to the city council for a six-hour day for monkeys. Father Williams states that the organ grinders of Omaha force the unhappy monkeys to work from twelve to sixteen hours a day, and give them no chance to go to school. What a contrast with New York!

The president of the New York arch club, just returned from a three months' stay in London and Paris, during which he devoted himself principally to ballooning, says: "I can see no reason why pleasure parties of six hours will not be a wonderful thing at our interior resorts in another year." Of course this exciting amusement will be too expensive for the middle classes.

A Chicago University professor is on record as saying that Americans segregate and isolate themselves too much and are losing the sense of fellowship. "We don't pour out our soul feelings to one another," he says, "and we fall to become confidential." Come, come! What is this professor's life? Did he ever take a three hours' railway journey without some chance stranger telling him the story of his life?

The statement by a lecturer that the country spends $3,000,000,000 a year on private crime, and one by the government that it costs up to $5,000,000,000 annually, shows some avenues of expense in which we might retreat. At least, none of the luxuries or necessities mentioned either pleasure or profit at all proportionate to the amount invested.

Prof. Shiller Mathews of the university of Chicago says that marriage is too much like a picnic. In some cases it is like a picnic when it rains.

Court proceedings in England have shown that a long lady who poses in music halls as the living statue "Gala-trea" costs as much as $500 a week, and yet it wouldn't be exactly right to say that her face is her fortune.

Scientists are still wondering when a man ceases to be useful. Some men are never useful; the chances are that if they are useful to begin with they remain so regardless of years.

The thing that cannot be done but once should be well done.

Now that the king of Siam has purchased a $75,000 diamond tiara for his wife doubtless she will find a conspicuous place on the front porch where she can sit and sew on buttons as the crown princess by.

Science now rises to remark that a frog can breathe with its mouth closed. Some of those doctors of the Postenstilk must feel rather stunted when they hold a staccato passage all night.

Those who do the best repeat the least.

A BIG PROFIT IN OIL

STANDARD OF INDIANA MADE 1,000 PER CENT. ANNUALLY.

SHOWN IN GOTHAM TRIAL

Peculiar Bookkeeping Problem in Accounts of New York Corporation and Parent Concern.

New York.—More light was shed upon the remarkable earning capacity of the various subsidiary companies of the Standard Oil company Wednesday when Frank B. Kellogg, who is conducting the federal suit, succeeded in placing upon the record the profits of 17 of the principal subsidiary companies in the years 1902 and 1903.

The statement of the earnings of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, which was recently fined $29,240,000 by Judge Landis, of Chicago, for rebating, disclosed that in 1902 the company earned no less than $10,616,082 on a capitalization of $4,000,000, or over 1000 per cent. a year. The Indianapolis company in 1903 earned more than any subsidiary company of the big combine.

New York.—Delving into the financial workings of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, the holding company of all the subsidiary organizations of the so-called oil trust, Frank B. Kellogg, conducting the federal suit for the dissolution of the company, brought forth Tuesday to public view for the first time the enormous profits made by the Standard Oil company.

In a period of eight years, from 1899 to 1906 inclusive, the company, its statement spread upon the records of Tuesday's hearings, was shown to have earned total profits of $30,318,254, or at the rate of more than $1,000,000 a year, and distributed to its shareholders in the same period $308,358,403.

Oil Bred $6,000,000.

Chicago.—The trust bonds in the history of criminal jurisprudence were filed Tuesday by Judge Peter S. Grosscup, of the United States circuit court, to secure the government's $29,240,000 judgment against the Standard Oil company of Indiana pending an appeal from the sentence imposed by Judge Landis.

The aggregate security required by Judge Grosscup is $4,000,000, represented by two bonds—a forthcoming bond of $4,000,000 and a conditional bond of $2,000,000. The total was considered by Judge Grosscup to represent the value of the property owned by the defendant company.

24 KILLED IN A WRECK.

Terrible Disaster Occurs Near Canaan Station, Vt.

White River Junction, Vt.—A fearful head-on collision between the southern Quebec express and the north-bound freight train at Canaan station, occurred four miles north of Canaan station early Sunday, due to a mistake in train dispatcher's orders, and from a demolished passenger coach there were taken out 24 dead and dying and 27 other passengers, many of whom were seriously wounded.

Nearly all those who were in the train were returning from a fair at Sherbrooke, Quebec, 60 miles north.

H. H. ROGERS IS STRICKEN

STANDARD OIL MAGNATE HAS BAD PARALYTIC ATTACK.

Due to Business Worry—His Retirement from Active Life Probable—Told by Relatives.

New York.—Information came from a sound source Monday that H. H. Rogers has suffered a stroke of paralysis. The president of the Amalgamated Copper company has been reported "ill" for about a fortnight, following his recent return from Europe, where he went some months ago for his health.

But despite the trip abroad and the temporary retirement from all business affairs, the Rockefeller chief has grown worse, an illness which culminated in the stroke of helplessness.

It is said that the magnate has been ill since his return from a fortnight's trip to Europe, where he was generally accompanied by his relatives and intimate friends being permitted to his bedside. One of these in a Boston court Monday afternoon confirmed the story, and gave details of the financier's breakdown.

The recent order to close the Montana mines of the Amalgamated Copper company is supposed to have been given by William G. Rockefeller, who will take the position formerly occupied by Rogers as the field general of the Standard Oil party.

Even should Rogers recover, it is believed that he will not return to his place in the directorate of the various companies with which he has been identified.

The decisions against the Standard Oil company and the failure of the Rockefeller family to stem the tremendous slumps in their companies are supposed to have been contributory causes to Rogers' condition.

SAD TRAGEDY IN GOTHAM

MARRIED MAN FATAL WOUNDS YOUNG AUSTRIAN HEIRESS.

Jealousy Causes the Deed—Bloody Sequel to Suits for Divorce and Alienation of Affection.

New York.—Drops Selgel, an heiress, 20 years of age, and daughter of a colonel in the Austrian army, now dead, was fatally shot Wednesday night by Julius Hoffman, a married man and formerly a lieutenant of Col. Selgel's regiment.

The tragedy was the outcome of jealousy on the part of Hoffman, who, after shooting Miss Selgel, tried to shoot himself, but was prevented by the dying girl.

Hoffman and his wife came to America in January, 1906, and the latter worked as a dressmaker and the latter lived with the Hoffmans in New York. The wife three months ago began divorce proceedings and instituted a suit against Miss Selgel for $15,000 damages, for alienating the affection of her husband. Recently Hoffman suspected that he had a rival in the young woman's affections and Wednesday he went to her apartment, demanding that she tell him the name of the man who had supplanted him in her love. Miss Selgel protested that she loved only Hoffman.

After threatening her with a pistol for half an hour, Hoffman shot her twice, and as he told the police, placed the muzzle of the pistol in his mouth intending to kill himself. He was shot by the trigger he says, Miss Selgel sprang upon him to prevent him and in the struggle that ensued the pistol was discharged. The bullet lodged in Miss Selgel's head and inflicting a mortal wound.

Miss Selgel was taken to a hospital, still declaring her love for Hoffman. She would have died in a fortnight of $100,000 a year hence.

Chicago.—Chicago's new city charter, the result of many months' work by the city's reform organization, was defeated in the special election Tuesday. The vote was nearly two to one against it.

The efforts of the United societies for Local Self-Government, the South Park board, the Deaneen faction among the Republicans and of the Democrats generally, are credited with the result. The claim that the new charter would result in much higher taxes had much to do with its defeat.

TRUST FOOLS TEXAS

CORSIANA COMPANY BELIEVED TO BE PART OF STANDARD.

TILFORD DOES NOT KNOW

Attorney Kellogg Says Officers of Late Control the Former—Immense Personal Profits of J. D. Rockefeller.

New York.—That the Standard Oil company is operating under the name of the Corsicana Refining company in the state of Texas, which has forbidden the oil combine to operate within the state, was indicated Thursday, when Wesley H. Tilford, treasurer of the Standard Oil company, under examination in the government's suit against the company, testified that J. D. Rockefeller, C. M. Payne and Frank Kellogg, the attorney for the government, states control the Corsicana company, are prominent in the conduct of affairs of the Standard Oil company.

Mr. Kellogg sought to draw from the witness the information that the Corsicana company was really a Standard Oil company and was operating in Texas because the anti-trust laws of that state would not permit the combine to operate there. Mr. Tilford replied that, so far as he knew, the Standard Oil company had no interests in Texas. He said that Mr. Forster and Mr. Payne were both officers of the Standard Oil company, but he was not aware that they owned the Corsicana company.

Another interesting development was the official statement made for the first time, of John D. Rockefeller's personal holdings in the Standard Oil company. Just to what extent the reputed head of the combine actually interested in the great concern has long been a matter of speculation. It was brought out that Mr. Rockefeller owned 258,854 shares, or more than one-fourth of the total 972,500 certificates of the Standard Oil company.

Based on the earnings of the company as placed on record Tuesday, it is computed that Mr. Rockefeller's personal profits during the past eight years have aggregated almost $125,000,000. At Tuesday's hearing it was testified that in the years 1899 to 1906 inclusive, the Standard Oil company had earned total profits of $450,318,934.

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

She swung the lantern at arm's length back and forth so that its rays at every forward motion struck my face like a blow.

"It isn't exactly pleasant in this cave. Unless you wish to turn me over to the lord high executioner, I will bid you good night."

"But the infancy of this—of coming in here to spy upon me—to help my enemy—the man who is seeking plunder—doesn't seem to trouble you."

"No. Not a particle!" she replied, and then, with an impatient gesture, "Go on!" she said, and the lantern looked at the wick. "I'm really disappointed to find that you were a little ahead of me, Squire Glenarm. I didn't give you credit for so much—perseverance. But if you have the notes—"

"The notes!" He told you there were notes, did he? The coward sent you here to find them, after his other tools failed."

She laughed that low laugh of hers that was like the bubble of a spring.

"Of course no one would dare do what the great Squire Glenarm says," she said wistfully.

"You can't know what your perjury means to me," I said. "That night at the Armstrongs, I thrilled at the sight of you. As you came down the stairs, I thought of you as my good angel, and I believed you, all my life, the better future that I wished to make for your sake."

"Please don't!" she exclaimed sorrowfully, the mirth all gone. I felt that my words had touched her, that there were regret and repentance in her tone and in the gesture with which she turned from me.

She hurried down the passage toward the chapel, swinging the lantern at her side, and I followed, still mystified, and angered by her composure. She even turned, with pretty courtesy, to hold the light for me at the crypt steps—a service that I accepted perforce and with joyous acquiescence in the irony of it. I knew that I did not believe a word of her conduct as to Pickering was utterly indefensible—I could not forget that; but the light of her eyes, her tranquil brow, the sensitive lips, whose mockery struck and pleased in a breath,—by such testimony my doubts were alternately reinforced and dispelled. Sweet by these changing moods I followed her out into the crypt.

"You seem to know a good deal about this place, and I suppose I can't object to your familiarizing yourself with your own property. And the notes—I'll give myself the pleasure of handing them to you to-morrow. You can cancel them and give them to Mr. Pickering—a fitting pledge between you."

"I thrust my hands into my pockets to give an impression of ease I did not possess."

"Yes," she remarked in a practical tone; "3320.000 dollars is no mean sum of money. Mr. Pickering will undoubtedly be delighted to have his debts cancelled for a life of devotion."

"In exchange for a life of devotion?" I sneered. "So you knew the sum—the exact amount of these notes. He hasn't served you well. He should have told you that we found them to-day."

"You are not nice. Are you, Squire Glenarm, when you are caught? But Mr. Pickering wasn't kind not to tell me. Why, I might catch a dreadful cold down here!"

She was like Olivia now. I felt the utter futility of attempting to reason with a woman who could become a child at will. She walked up the steps and out into the church vestibule. Then before the outer door she spoke with decision.

"We part here, if you please! And I have not the slightest intention of trying to explain my errand into that passage. You have jumped to your own conclusion, which will have to serve you. I advise you not to think very much about it,—to the exclusion of more important business.—Squire Glenarm!"

She lifted the lantern to turn out its light, and it made a glory of her face, but she paused and held it toward me.

"Pardon me! You will need this to light you home."

"But you must not cross the park alone!"

"Good night! Please be sure to close the door to the passage when you go down. You are a dreadfully heedless person, Squire Glenarm."

She flung open the outer chapel door and ran along the passage toward St. Agatha's.

Down through the passage I hastened, her lantern lighting my way. At the door of Bewilderment I closed the opening, setting up the line of wall as we had left it in the afternoon, and then I went back to the library, unlocked the fire and brooded until Bates came to relieve me at dawn.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Besieged. We had swayed round breakfast, though I believe you had manifested an appetite, and we were cheering ourselves with the latest talk possible. Stoddard, who had been to the chapel for his usual seven o'clock service, was deep in his pocket Greek testament he always carried.

Bates can't in to report a summons at the outer wall, and Larry and I went together to answer it, sending Bates to keep watch toward the lake.

Our friend, the sheriff, with a deputy, was outside in a buggy. He stood up and talked to us as we went out. "You gentlemen, I'm only doing my duty, but the court orders me to eject all trespassers on the premises, and I've got to do it."

"The law is being used by an ill-famous sounder to protect himself. I don't intend to give in. We can hold out here for three months, if necessary, and I advise you to keep away from this place as far as you can."

The sheriff listened respectfully, resting his arms on top of the wall.

"You ought to understand, Mr. Glenarm, that I ain't the court; I'm the sheriff, and it's not for me to pass on these questions. I've got my orders, and I've got to enforce 'em, and I hope you will not make it necessary for me to use violence. The judge said to me, 'We deplore violence in such cases. Those were his honor's very words.'"

"You may give his honor my compliments and tell him that we are sorry not to see things his way, but there are points involved in this business that he doesn't know anything about, and we, unfortunately, have no time to lay them before him."

The sheriff's seeming satisfaction with his position on the wall and his disposition to parley had begun to arouse my suspicions, and Larry, seven times excited, impatiently at the absurdity of discussing my affairs with a person whom he insisted on calling a constable, to the sheriff's evident annoyance.

"You, sir,—we've got our eye on you, and you'd better come along peacefully. Laurence Donovan, the descriptions fits you to a 't'."

"You could buy a nice farm with that reward, couldn't you?" began Larry, but at that moment Bates ran toward us calling loudly.

"They're coming across the lake, sir," he reported, and instantly the sheriff's head disappeared, and as we ran toward the house we heard his hoarse, pealing down the road toward St. Agatha's.

"The law be damned. They don't intend to come in here by the front door as a matter of law," said Larry. "Pickering's merely using the sheriff to give respectability to his maneuvers."

It was no time for a discussion of motives. We ran out on the main passage, far out on the lake we saw half a dozen men, approaching the Glenarm grounds. They advanced steadily over the light snow that lay upon the ice, one man slightly in advance and evidently the leader.

"It's Morgan," exclaimed Bates. "And there's Ferguson."

Larry chuckled and slapped his thigh.

"Observe that stocky little devil just behind the leader. He's my friend from Scotland Yard. Lads! this is really an international affair."

"Bates, go back to the house and get a gun. I'll be back in five minutes. The sheriff's loose somewhere."

"And Pickering is directing his forces from afar," remarked Stoddard. "I count ten men in Morgan's line," said Larry. "And the sheriff and his deputy make two more. That's 12, no counting Pickering, that we know of on the other side."

Warn them away before they get much nearer," suggested Stoddard. "We don't want to hurt people if we can help it,—and at this I went to the end of the pier. Morgan and his men were now quite near, and there was no mistaking their intentions. Most of them carried guns, the others revolvers and long ice hooks.

"Morgan," I called, holding up my hands for a truce, "we wish you no harm, but if you enter these grounds you do so at your peril."

It was also of course, that we had swayed round breakfast, though I believe you had manifested an appetite, and we were cheering ourselves with the latest talk possible. Stoddard, who had been to the chapel for his usual seven o'clock service, was deep in his pocket Greek testament he always carried.

that qualification for the months of July and August. During the month of June when the soil is colder the frost is not infallible. On the mornings of June 11, 12 and 13, 1906 frost occurred quite generally in the Wisconsin bogs and the maximum temperatures were as follows:—

	Cranmour	Mather	Berlin
June 11	70	74	71
12	68	72	66
13	68	71	67

The frost often begins to disappear so early in the morning that it is not always observed. Several instances of this kind have come to my attention and especially was this the case during the June frosts of last year. Unless a map is on the marsh before daybreak he cannot positively state that frost did not occur. I have known the temperature at Berlin to fall as low as 28.3 degrees at a five inch height and 33 degrees near the surface without there being any white frost apparent, yet the forms later in the day begin to wither indicating that they had been damaged and even destroyed altho the frost was not apparent at five a. m.

Appreciation of the relation between the soil temperature and the occurrence of frost it has often been

A summary of the temperature the last ten days of August and the first ten days of September 1907, shows the following average temperatures.

	Month Maximum	Minimum	Average
August	82.1	62.2	70.8
September	81.9	60.8	70.5
August	82.1	4.6	61.36
September	67.36	42.37	55.45

The month of August and also September we find to be warmer in with August having a maximum of 82.1 and a minimum of 4.6 and September with a maximum of 67.36 and a minimum of 42.37 degrees average for the year of 1907.

This difference in temperature undoubtedly is one of the chief causes for the slow progress in the development of the crop which is now being harvested, and which we find does not come up to the expectation of most conservative growers.

Pink harvested the ninth of August could hardly be said to be up to normal color and was certainly not of size for the season.

Owing to the under-size of much of the fruit, many estimates are made to be cut down by the actual figures.

Stop worrying. Stop hurrying. Cleanse the body and mind of all impurities. Bat to live instead of to eat. Take plenty of exercise in open air. Breathe deeply. Love your neighbor. And call upon a doctor and if you must.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Judge Becomes Suspicious.

Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court recently celebrated the golden anniversary of his wedding and the event brought to light some stories of the stalwart jurist. One relates how the justice was riding toward Washington on a sleeping car from Louisville. Before retiring he went into the smoking compartment to get a drink of water. There were only a dozen men in the car and a attendant had been passed up the aisle and the glass used for the liquor. Justice Harlan took up the glass, sniffed it and turned on the smokers.

"Who," he roared in his deep-bellied voice, "has had the temerity to drink whiskey out of this glass?"

He had, indeed, placed up the owner of the flask somewhat awed by the great bulk of the justice.

"Then, sir," said the justice, sternly, "where are you hiding the bottle?"
